

CUSTOMER GROWTH

Customer growth depends on loyalty, not discounts alone

A data-led view of repeat behavior, subscriptions, products, age groups and shipping.

THE DATASET

3,900 purchases reveal a broad but uneven customer base

CUSTOMER SIGNAL

3.7

review ratings required category-level median imputation

ANALYSIS STACK

4 tools

Python, PostgreSQL, SQL, and Power BI

3,900

purchases across 18 columns

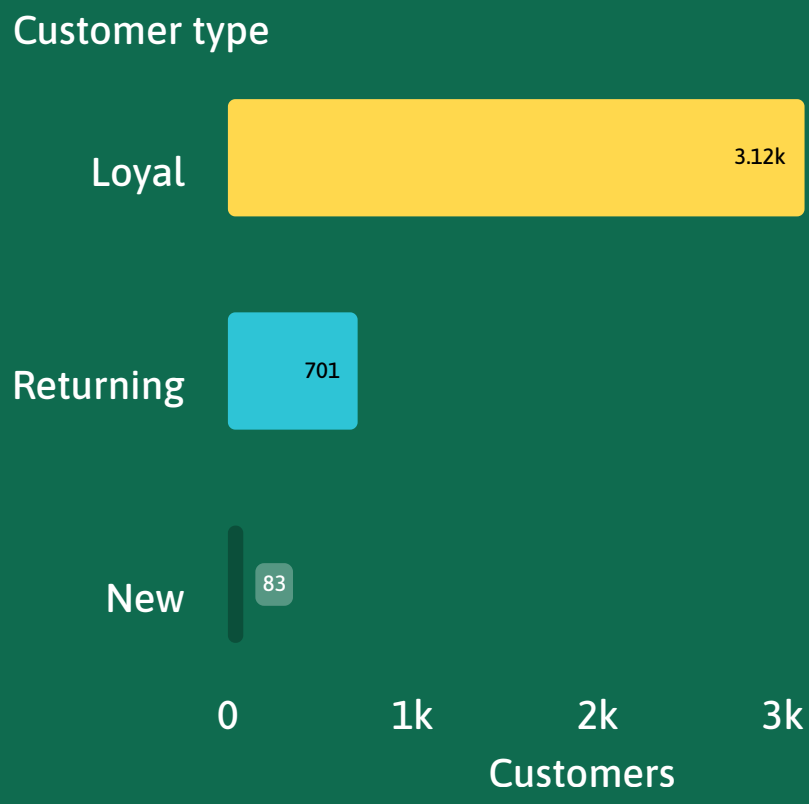

The dataset is broad enough to segment, but uneven enough to require careful interpretation.

CUSTOMER MIX

Loyal customers are the foundation, but the middle is the opportunity

Prioritize moves that convert returning buyers into loyal customers while giving new buyers a reason to come back.

SUBSCRIPTIONS

Subscriptions have reach, but not yet a clear spending advantage

The growth question is not simply acquisition. It is whether subscriber benefits can change repeat behavior and value.

Customer group	Customers · average spend · total revenue
Subscribers	1,053 · $59.49 · $62,645
Non-subscribers	2,847 · $59.87 · $170,436

CONVERSION POOL

Repeat buyers still sit mostly outside the subscription program

This is the clearest conversion pool: customers already showing intent, but not yet enrolled.

DISCOUNT DEPENDENCE

Discounts attract high spend, but product dependence varies

Use discounts selectively, especially where demand appears most promotion-dependent.

839

high-spending discount-user purchases

CUSTOMER SEGMENTS

Young adults lead revenue, but the gap across age groups is narrow

Lead with young adults, then adapt the message across segments instead of treating age as a single growth lever.

FULFILLMENT

Shipping speed supports a modestly higher basket

Test express shipping as part of a premium experience, especially for high-intent repeat buyers.

THE GROWTH AGENDA

Four moves can turn the analysis into growth

01

Convert the middle

Target returning buyers with subscription benefits.

02

Reward loyalty

Build a program that makes the next purchase easier and more valuable.

03

Control discounting

Protect margin on promotion-dependent products.

04

Merchandise with evidence

Pair top-rated items with best sellers and test express-shipping offers.
